You can read our detailed review about the game in here. Eden of Earth is a hybrid of a tower defense and survival game. It does not require you to think in terms of managing resources, rather, it requires you to think in terms of defeating enemies and protecting your base. In Eden of Earth you play as a human with the goal of helping to keep the human race alive. After the collapse of humanity, you are the last remaining person. You are tasked with protecting a handful of survivors who you need to keep alive until you can find help. Game Play You are placed at the beginning in a base. It is small and it's only meant to house the few humans you have. That base is protected by a limited number of turrets that you must strategically use. You need to do this so that you can keep your base from being overrun by the enemy. The environment is perfect for the game. There are some wolves that you can fight, but they are not very difficult, nor do they need to be handled very carefully. There are also a handful of spider-like creatures that you need to avoid. The last threat are the flying sharks. You need to constantly watch them because if you do not they will break your turrets. Eventually you will meet more humans that have been scattered around the world. The humans that you meet don't always have any weapons, but they can become more deadly as the game progresses. They may be sick, or simply missing pieces. This means you need to use them as a type of team member for your group. They are never too powerful and you can't get hurt by them unless you let them get close. They don't need to be saved too often, but when they do need to be saved they will not thank you for dropping them off in the wilderness. Progression in the game is rather simple. The first thing that you are tasked with is to defend your base. You will need to make sure that it is safe from the enemies that want to take it from you. This means that you will need to guard the entrance of the base with turrets. You will need to place your turrets strategically so that you can keep the enemy from just running in and taking it over. Once the enemy is gone, you can start building more turrets. Eventually you will run out of the amount of room that you have. That is when you will need to start building larger defense systems 82157476af
